as the Gospel of republican liberty, and upon its authors, as the chosen apostles whose mission it was to expound the everlasting political truths which it embodies and to engraft them upon the minds and hearts of a people just emancipated from the rule of a foreign tyranny. Those truths are as self-evident, to-day, as in the hour of their first promulgation, and will be as conservative of popular liberty in the distant future, as they were in the better days of this government ere corruption sapped its foundation and ambition seized the opportunity to complete its

We advocate no standstill policy; inaction is as much an impossibility in the constitution of man as in the material universe, where all is motion and action. LETTER FROM ASHLAND CITY.

has brought its arduous labors to a close, and in some respects is not unlike the fable of the nativity of the mouse. Especially is this true of the Tippling Bill. Hopes were raised that were doomed to disappointment. The friends of Temperance had just reasons to suppose that something would be done by the Legislature to stay the tide of destruction that is sweeping over our State as a besom of desolation. But instead, a shapeless, inert abortion was brought forth, awaiting the vivifying influence of the people to impart to it life and energy. So abnormal was this creature of hasty legislation that the Governor was constrained, from a clear sense of constitutional duty, to interpose his veto, rather than costly legislation should grow out of it, when it would finally be declared unconstitutional by the court of last resort. Many believed when the passage of the bill was first announced that they could see the silver lining around the dark cloud that has so long obscured our moral skies. and thought the sunlight of deliverance was just ahead; but not so.
